Ciao Systems, Inc. Launches New Product-Focused Website

At the new www.CiaoSoftware.com, restaurateurs find solutions to their every restaurant-automation software need

ARLINGTON, VA November 3, 2008 – Arlington, Virginia-based Ciao Systems, Inc., which specializes in restaurant management (or point-of-sale) software, announced today that this week it will launch its new product-focused website, www.CiaoSoftware.com.

“Ciao prides itself on its quality products and personalized service, but we didn’t have a website that expressed that. Now, our new website exhibits the real Ciao identity and connects us to our clients and potential clients more than ever,” said Jonathan W. Price, CEO and founder of Ciao Systems, Inc.

Visitors to the site will find the new look more interactive, easier to navigate, and full of detailed product and company information. The site contains all of the relevant and important information restaurateurs will need to find the right restaurant management (or point-of-sale) software.

Ciao’s website showcases its flagship product, Ciao Point of Sale, and a wide range of modules including back office, credit card, gift card and accounts, table management, delivery, kitchen display, and enterprise. There is also information about different restaurant concepts including fine dining, quick service, convenience stores, delivery, cafeterias, and chains.

Through the website, interested parties can request a product demo, view actual screen shots from the software, and find a Ciao dealer.

There is also a career section that highlights employment opportunities and puts those interested in touch with human resources. Another addition is the press center that allows readers access to company news and announcements.

To learn more about the products Ciao Systems offers, visit www.CiaoSoftware.com or email info@ciaosoftware.com.

About Ciao Systems
